Company A, Third Ward, Have Another Meeting-The Constitution adopted-Resoluant state of the weather, a large number of members of the new third ward company was held at Temperance Hall last night.

After the transaction of some preliminary General Carrington arose and stated that he had prepared a Constitution, which he wished to submit to the consideration of the meeting. He said he had not come to speak, but for business. He offered the following Constitution for their adoption, which was substantially the Constitution of the Washington Light Infantry, the oldest and one of the best companies in our city, and the same which he had the honor to command some years ago; he said, that upon consultation with his friends, they had determined to make this military organization permanent; he desired to make the "Union Regiment of Washington" equal to the Seventh Regiment of New York, or any other in the ntry; and that if his friends would stand by him, he would accomplish his purpose, which he thought would be highly creditable to our city.

He then proceeded to read the proposed Coustitution. As this will probably be substan-tially the same as that of the other companies of the Union Regiment, we insert it entire. It is as follows:

They were greeted with loud and frequent applause during their per-formance last night, which was well deserved.

About forty or fifty persons only were present at the commencement of the show, which was still turther reduced when the order to clear the room of outsiders was given.

The meeting was called to order by the Pres ident, Mr. R. Cleary, who requested that all persons not members of the organization, or who were unfriendly to its objects, should instantaneously leave the room. A number of persons took the hint and left, among whom was the reporter of a spicy evening paper of

The reporter of the Republican, who appeared to be particularly obnoxious to the assembled plotters, seeming disposed to linger, was politely requested by an individual somewhat notorious among the faro-bank keepers of this city, and who is at the present time an employee in the Capitol, to leave the room. Having an imcapito, to leave the room. Having an important engagement further up town, which until that moment had entirely escaped his memory, after thanking him for the reminder, he left, with the intention of calling again at the earliest opportunity. He noticed, however, that the reporter of a relegious that the reporter of a notorious secession sheet in this city was allowed to remain, and that he in this city was allowed to remain, and that he seemed to be hail fellow well met with the traitors who were plotting the overthrow and disruption of the Government that feeds them.

While we were there, and before the meeting organized, engaging in conversarion with an in-individual who some months since so nobly proved his loyalty to and affection for Southern institutions by leading the mob in their attack upon the Republican "Wigwam," we were very gravely informed that, in a certain contingency, the city was to be captured and held by the association of National Volunteers as capital of the Southern Confederacy, as prophesied by their oracles. The room occupied by these patriotic indi-viduals as a place of meeting, is well known to the citizens of the second ward as a room in which most of the darkey "shindigs" are held. The coldness of the weather obviated the necessity of appointing a "smelling committee," phere of the room might have been improved considerably, had the windows been hoisted Between the effluvia left by the darkies, the stench of whisky, and the smell of sulphur, the perfume created was none of the most pleasant and refreshing to olfactory organs unused to the at nosphere of secession gatherings.

One of the hostlers employed in the stable gives us a few "pints," which we have not the heart to keep from our readers.

The Hostler's Account. The Hostler's Account.

After the meeting was called to order, the first business in order appeared to be getting rid of obnoxious reporters, and several individuals belonging to that profession were advised to mizzle. The reporters alluded to being order-loving persons, and moreover having the ferocious-looking moustache of the doorkeer before their eyes, incontinently sloped. The reporter of the secession organ alone remained. This young gentleman who has the mained. This young gentleman, who has the advantage over most of his colleagues in personal appearance, (which fact may probably have facilitated his admission into the circle,) took his seat, and the show began.

A young man, dressed in homespun, with hair combed back of his ears in regular chivalry style, with a sudden jerk, got upon his feet, and began to read a series of resolutions of the real disunion stamp, which being deemed too lengthy (some forty pages of manuscript) for publication in one issue of the secession organ, on request of all present, were cut down some thirty-nine pages. The reso-lutions thus curtailed were seconded by an individual who is well known to have been a recent applicant for admission into the "Wigrecent applicant for admission into the "Wig-wam," rejected on account of bad character. The individual alluded to proceeded to deliver quite an argumentative and eloquent speech, in which our hostler friend became deeply in-terested—so much so, indeed, that he fell asleep in the course of a few moments. When he awoke, he observed the members, one by one, stealthily approaching the table of the Secretary, and drawing therefrom, with a nervous grasp, small pieces of paper, which were immediately handed to a corpulent individual near at hand, to be read. Our friend shuddered. Visions of assassinations, and other equally horrible things, flashed through his mind. He observed another young man, also rigged out in a suit of homespun, raise his hand apparently in great agony, after having withdrawn it from the mysterious box contain-ing the equally mysterious papers. In en-deavoring to move around in the hayloft, so as to get into a better position for seeing hearing, his foot became firmly fixed tween two stationary objects, causing him to cry out with pain. Upon hearing the sounds overhead, cries of "police!" "police!" escaped the terrified secessionists, and in a few oments the stable was completely cleared. By nine o'clock, the stable had resumed its usual quiet, and nothing was heard but the neighing of the horses and the snoring of the

Mr. B., being quite deaf, Mr. Rosen-berry mistook the idea of the gentleman, and, thinking it was only an act of impertinence, proceeded to chastise him for it. This name has been assumed by the Company in honor of that sterling patriot, whose name from sire to son has been before noted in American history. General Edward C.
